Mississippi Assessment

Following the hurricane the Mississippi Rural Water Association (MRWA) set up the initial command post where generators and manpower began coming in from utilities in Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas and Florida. MRWA contacted every utility in the effected areas to gain an understanding of the needs (phone and on-site with the utilities that could not be reached over the telephone).

With the help of Alabama, Arkansas, and Florida Rural Water Associations, MRWA was able to organize and form partnerships to assess, recover, and provide relief assistance. A team of 21 utilities from Florida moved into Mississippi to provide assistance. The utilities were part of a system called “FlaWARN”(Florida Water Agency Response Network) which is a state wide mutual aid agreement where “utilities help utilities”. The North Mississippi Mayors Association (NMMA) moved in to assist local utilities recover utilizing their “adopt-a-utility” initiative which makes permanent repairs and get the town back to full functionality.
